March 2007

To whom it may concern,

I have employed the services of Christian Thompson on a series of contracts for WWF Indonesia since May 2006. Throughout, he has consistently provided a high standard of communications and programmatic research support for WWF advocacy to conserve and sustainably manage the Heart of Borneo, a 220,000 sq km area of equatorial rainforest. I have been very impressed with the quality of his research, technical input and writing style for both technical and communications audiences. In particular he has written a number of successful media releases on a broad range of themes, often to tight deadlines. What has impressed me most is that the products he produces are of such high standard they are suitable for immediate release (I.E. no editing is required!). His accurate and detailed research recently formed the basis for a high profile news feature on new species discoveries on Borneo, which became the WWF Network's most successful news story in 2006.

He is enjoyable to work with and is excellent value for money. I have no hesitation in recommending him highly to others.
